

Protected Disclosures: Confidential Phone Line for LPC Employees

You can use the confidential phone line to report any suspected serious wrongdoing that has, is currently, or is planned to take place at LPC.

This phone line (monitored by a New Zealand-based Call Centre) has been established to facilitate the disclosure and investigation of serious wrongdoing at LPC as defined by the Protected Disclosures Act 2000 and LPC's Whistle Blowing and Protected Disclosures Policy (available from the People team).

How it works

The aim of the phone line ensures the protection of any disclosures that you believe, on reasonable grounds, is or is likely to be true.

Please be aware that you must be aware that LPC will make all reasonable endeavours to conceal your identity and there are certain circumstances where it may need to be revealed.

Before using the phone line, please ensure you have tried all internal avenues to raise your concern, including speaking with your Manager, LPC Chief Financial Officer or General Manager People and Safety Kirstie Gardener.

Serious wrongdoing includes:

- Unlawful, corrupt, or irregular use of LPC funds or resources.
- Something that is a serious risk to public safety, public health, or the environment
- Something that is a serious risk to the maintenance of the law, including the prevention and detection of offences, the investigation of offences, and the right to a fair trial
- Something that is a criminal offence
- Conduct by any LPC staff that is oppressive, improperly discriminatory, grossly negligent, or gross mismanagement

If you have any other concerns about serious wrongdoings that don't directly meet these conditions, we still encourage you to use the phone line.

What happens to my Protected Disclosure?

When you have completed the phone call, a report detailing your disclosure will be sent to LPC's Chief Financial Officer or General Manager People and Safety Kirstie Gardener for investigation and potential action.

Make the call:

0800 TIPOFF (0800 847 633)

Calls are encouraged to be made between 7am to 9pm, however the phone line is monitored 24/7.
